From the Bethel Town Office Street Numbering System Explained

Work on Bethel's street numbering, being developed for use by the town's emergency services, is well advanced. The Town Office has now been working for several weeks on the project. Bethel Village, West Bethel, Northwest Bethel, including all connecting roads major and minor, have been numbered to date. When completed, the system will provide a ready reference point for almost every structure in the town.

Streets are being given one number on each side of the street for every 50 feet of frontage, a system that yields about 210 numbers per mile. If one were to look down a street being numbered, odd numbers would be on the left hand side, even on the right. The 50 foot frontage is small enough to provide additional numbers for new buildings that may be added to lots. It is large enough, however, so that most buildings will get no more than one number. A few large structures in town will get one number even though they contain many individual shops or apartments. In such cases, the owner may use letters to designate units within the building. The same will be true for trailer parks, cluster housing, motels, etc.

One problem still to be solved, however, is how to arrive at a proper name for every street in town. Some streets have several names—the East Bethel, Middle Intervale, Rumford, River Road, for instance. Sometimes two streets have the same name: Ferry Roads in West Bethel and Northwest Bethel, for instance. Some have no names, only route numbers, and often it is uncertain which portion

ENNEKING EXHIBIT OPENS AT MOSES MASON MUSEUM

The Moses Mason Museum opened its exhibition of Enneking paintings and covered bridge art on Aug. 14 in Bethel. The exhibition features six paintings, four by the 19th century American impressionist painter John J. Enneking and two by his contemporaries, John Twachtman and Abbott Graves. All paintings in this special exhibition of American impressionist art are part of a private collection on loan to the museum from the J. Howell Crosby family.

The perspective for this exhibit changed as its preparation and research were in progress. Originally, the intent was to exhibit paintings of the artist whose visits to this area in the second half of the last century caused the Sunday River covered bridge to become known as "Artist's Bridge". However, further research and findings led to the conclusion that

This painting, "Hyde Park Spring," was identified through a connection with former Sunday River resident Celdon B. Foster.

FORESTRY WORKSHOP IN BETHEL, AUG. 23-24

The University of Maine at Orono has announced that it will be offering two workshops on hardwood silviculture at sites in Orono, Aug. 20 and 21, and at Bethel, Aug. 23 and 24.

Bethel workshop arrangements were made in coordination with the U. S. Forest Service and the Greater Bethel Chamber of Commerce. Bethel area facilities that will be involved in supporting the workshop here include the Moses Mason Museum, The Bethel Inn, and other lodgings and restaurants.

The workshops, which will include both classroom and outdoor sessions, will be highly technical and will require participants to have some technical background in growing trees, according to UMO Extension forester Marvin Blumenstock. Some of the topics to be considered are managing trees on uneven and even age basis, density per acre and regenerating stands.

Instructors are Dave Solomon, research forester stationed at UMO, and Kenneth Lancaster and William Leak, all from the U. S. Forest Service, which is sponsoring the workshops with the UMO Cooperative Extension Service and the Maine Chapter, Society of American Foresters.

Further information may be obtained from the UMO Conferences and Institutes Division, 124 College Avenue, Orono. Participants may earn 1.3 Continuing Education Units.

Greenwood City

— Mrs. Collette Morgan, Corres. —

Some of the days and nights this week have been more mercifully human and I wished to hike and enjoy the freshness of the air. But there were too many things to do, I have wanted to walk where the hillsides are covered with forest lands and where I could place my feet on some old grown-over trail and follow it to a mysterious end and then make a trail of my own. I like the snap of dry twigs and the feel of the moss. I like a few boulders covered with lichens to rest against and then to wonder and marvel at these minute etchings. I'd like to sit on a dead stump and look at the sprouts which have appeared around it testifying to nature's repairs.

Always I come away peaceful in thought and refreshed in mind. There are many deep fundamental lessons to learn on the trails.

There is always an urgency that August brings. Berries and vegetables to pick and put into the freezer. (There were days when I thought that I'd like to go in with them.)

However, I have noted the changes as I have walked to and from or worked in the gardens. The time of haste for the plants is over but it didn't seem to be that way for me. In August nature is generous with her gifts as she surveys the summer's beauty. Every aspect, every scene offers some new delight.

Down across the road she has decorated her tabled pond with lily cups and lily pads for plates. The cattails serve as candles.

At noon now the sun is at a different angle.

By the roadsides there are a few impatient asters coming to take the place of the day lilies which are now through blooming. They look ragged and overgrown.

"The first wild asters, lovely though they be, Have always sent a stabbing pain through me, Their deep dark purple fills me with surprise, Surely I think, some fancy blinds my eyes; Surely not yet, not yet should they appear When it is so early in the year!" Grace Noll Crowell

The first sprays of goldenrod are blooming in many places. Phlox flames in almost every door yard and how lovely it is! Along the pasture fence the

What a glorious, much needed rain. Some wells are getting low and maybe this will help. Richard Andrews finished mowing at the Community Hall, Thursday, and it has rained ever since. Tuesday I went to Mexico and visited Joe's sister-in-law, Mrs. Florence Barrett. I went through the Greenwoods and Worthley Pond and it was nice and cool. I came home through Rumpf Point and called on Mr. and Mrs. Harold Enman, also Mr. and Mrs. Lionel O'Brien at the top of Merryfield Hill.

Doris Lawrence is on vacation from Penley Corp. this week. Monday they went to Berlin, N. H., to celebrate Doris' birthday. She should have picked a good hot week, then sat under a bush. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Ukelele, Portland, Conn., spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Joe Kalinowski at "Big Rock."

Jeff Coffin mowed the lawn for uncle "Root" Lawrence Thursday, then stayed all night. Other callers, Ellery Lawrence and friend, North Waterford; Stan Heath, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Coffin, Jimbo, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Kalinowski, Eveline Barrett.

Mr. and Mrs. "Root" Lawrence went to Littlefield's Beach Sunday to wish Brenda Millett a happy "sweet sixteen" birthday.

Has anyone noticed how thick and snug the corn husks are on an ear of corn? Does that mean anything about our coming winter season? It could mean most anything. We will take what the Good Lord sends to us.

It's a beautiful world we live in whether we travel a road or a trail. The scenic splendor of mountains, forests, rivers, lakes, or ponds form a lovely backdrop for us all if we take time to see.

Ruth Hastings and I attended the Delta Kappa Gamma picnic at Roberta Strout's cottage on Worthley Pond on Wednesday. On Friday we went to the sale at Bryant Pond.

Ann Holt drove to Princeton the last part of the week and visited her brother, David, and his wife. She then went to the wedding of her college friend in Frederickton, N. B., over the week end.

Our neighbors, Gregg and Goffrey Inman, are with the fire fighters in Montana.

Mrs. Laurence French and her mother-in-law, called on us on Saturday. They also visited Laurence's uncle and aunt, Frank and Dorothy Curtis.

At the Hayes Homestead the week has been very busy. Mr. and Mrs. Terry Spire and son, from Indiana, Mrs. Erwin Hayes and son, New York, have been there for the week. Other callers were Mr. and Mrs. Chester Haselton, Mrs. Bonita Vining and two girls, West Paris, Mr. and Mrs. Ardell Hayes, Auburn; Mr. and Mrs. Duane Hayes and children, West Paris. Sunday it was snowing on Mt. Washington and the temperature at the house was in the 50s. Having this with the rain made it a chilly day.

Ben Gordon had a get-together at his camp on the mountain. Everybody had a good time in spite of the weather and he had two wood fires burning. The fog and haze shut off the view, which must be beautiful on a clear day as when we left it had started to clear and could begin to see the mountains.

Hot dogs, hamburgs, chips and dips, salads, corn-on-the-cob, and desserts were enjoyed by all. The ladies with Ruth Mason organizing the job, helped with the meal. Those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Homer Bartlett, Jefferson, N. H.; Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Villeneuve, Berlin, N. H.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mason, Jr., Carole, Melinda and David; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mason III and two children; Mr. and Mrs. Scot Mason and two children; Jody Shimamura; Leslie Lapham; Mr. and Mrs. Bob Keniston; Dr. and Mrs. Leonard Shaw; Butch Crockett; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Aylward; Mr. and Mrs. Victor Coolidge and two children; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Angevine; Mr. and Mrs. Baudou, Mary Frances and Nathan; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gibson; Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Hutchins; Mr. and Mrs. Steve Anderson and two boys; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Murphy and Mrs. Murphy's brother and family, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Greenberg and two children from Dracut, Mass.

This gets people together who just don't seem to have time to go visit or can always find jobs to be done around the house. Monday, the 6th, Elaine Hutchins, Misty and Shilo, and Marjorie Conner went to Small Point to visit Ramal Stevens and Sarah Stevens, who were camping there, and Kim and Rhonda Parker from Milford, Conn. Ramal had a fresh codfish he had caught. They also had lobster, mussels and corn-on-the-cob.

Aug. 4, Elaine Hutchins went blueberrying with Harlan Hutchins and Lynn and Tim Hutchins of North Windham, to White Cap Mountain, Andover. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Angevine came back Friday from a Canadian fishing trip. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Angevine's daughter and family, the Bob Baudous, came Tuesday to spend the rest of the summer. They drove in from New Mexico where they had spent the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Greenberg, Debbie and David, of Dracut, Mass., were week end visitors of his sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Murphy.

Mrs. Frank Murphy is on vacation this week. Pat Saunders took her son, Richard, to Stephens Memorial Hospital Wednesday where Richard had a cast put on his lower arm where he had broken a small bone in his wrist area.

Pat's and my yard sale got pretty nearly rained out but did have enough people come so it wasn't a complete flop.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Hannon went to the tennis tournament in North Conway, N. H.

Daniel Hannon and Peter Brown played in the tennis tournament held this week end at Gould for the cancer fund.

Aug. 3, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Hannon and two girls went to Penobscot to visit Mr. and Mrs. Larry Arsenault and Matt who are vacationing there.

Mr. and Mrs. John Laban and family had as guests from Friday to Sunday, John's nieces, Susan and Heather Wilson, Katrine

Herboldt and her baby Kristen from Yankton, S. D.

Mr. and Mrs. John Laban and family recently visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Casey, in Gilmanton, N. H.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Butters went to Chester Hayes, Shelburne, N. H., Tuesday and Sunday went to Lovell where they visited Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Milliken.

Mr. and Mrs. Ricky Seames left Saturday morning and came back Sunday. They stayed with her folks Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stearns in their camper near Small Point. Mr. and Mrs. R. Glenn Murphy were also there with their camper. The three families got together for a couple of lobster feasts.

On the write-up on the Strong Horse Show, Aug. 4, we are sorry that Melinda Mason, riding Seames horse Smokey, and bringing home seven ribbons, was omitted.

Friday, Mike Gordon, Frank and Grace Gibson, George Gibson and Ira Gibson, left for South Carolina late in the evening. They left George off at his ship in Norfolk, Va., and then went on to South Carolina where they visited Wilfred. They got back Monday afternoon. On the way back they had trouble in some places getting gas.

Tuesday, Aug. 7, I went down to my sister's, Iva Holden's, in Norway, Iva, I, Pearl Holden and Susan Bradford, went to Portland where I picked up George's ticket and the girls went school shopping. We all ate at York's Steak House.

German Diary

— Ann Morton

As we traveled from Germany into the Netherlands, we were watching for dikes, windmills and people wearing wooden shoes. We were not disappointed, but we saw so many things that we didn't expect. Because the land is so flat and actually below sea level, the dikes are vital. They are high grassy mounds bordering the sea and inland waterways. Fields are neatly bordered and crossed by small canals.

We saw few fences, as the sheep, pigs, goats and cows were contained in their own grazing area by small canals. Bridges were built over the canals to homes on the other side, and boats of all kinds were seen on the larger canals. In winter they also provide miles of ice skating, Hans Brinker style.

Due to the high cost of land and high taxes, thousands of people live in houseboats along the canals. These are supposed to be taxed, but the laws are not strictly enforced.

Keukenhof Estates, a seventy acre enclosed park, boasts "millions of bulb flowers," flowering shrubs, ponds dotted with swans, and 5000 square meters of greenhouses. We enjoyed a walk there, the guide having found a wheel chair for me, and marvelled at the huge floral arrangements in the Queen Juliana Pavilion. Displays of bulb development were interesting.

The Franz Rosen tulip nursery at Vogelenzang showed us hundreds of varieties of tulips and other bulb flowers. Outside in the fields we could see the bulbs being developed for sale. As soon as they start to flower, the flowers are cut out to allow the bulb to become strong. The huge tulip parade that we saw the next day showed us some of the uses that were made of those beautiful blossoms.

The large floats were made of tulips, hyacinths, daffodils and forsythia. The parade started in Haarlem and ended five hours later. School groups and companies made the parade.

Madurodam, the miniature village near The Hague shows many of Holland's important buildings and much of its culture in a realistic setting landscaped by small trees and tiny plants. It is made to look real by hundreds of tiny people, animals and traffic in the streets.

The path meandered past one hundred thirty separate buildings, factories, air airport, a busy seaport and railroad yard; and everything was scaled to one twenty-fifth its size. The Inner Court of Parliament was beautiful with its tiny Golden coach and military band playing. Organ music and a choir could be heard as we passed the elaborate Great Church.

Our visit to Amsterdam started with a canal boat ride which showed us the unique features of the city. During our free time there we ate lunch by the National Monument in Dam Square overlooking the Royal Palace. From there we walked to Anne Frank's house and relived some of the horror that this area suffered during World War II.

In the fishing village of Volendam we saw women in their costumes, which are their working clothes. While mending the fishing nets in a large field on the North Sea coast, they wear seven woolen skirts for warmth. We walked the cobbled streets and admired the neat homes. Side walks go right along the edge of houses and no one uses shades or drapes.

As our tour bus passed tulip fields, thatched roofed homes, and a blend of old and new, our guide told us the history of the area and pointed out points of interest.

We learned that the Queen lives in Amsterdam and comes once a year to her palace in The Hague. As that time she rides in her golden coach to the Binnenhof (Inner Court) to attend the opening of Parliament. Also at the Hague we saw the Peace Palace, a gift from Andrew Carnegie. given by countries all over the world. Trees in The Hague were decorated with plastic oranges in honor of the Queen's birthday, since she is from the House of Orange.

No visit to Holland would be complete without a visit to a cheese farm, a chance to watch a Klompen Maker at work making wooden shoes, and a tour of a Deft factory and showroom. The showroom was small and crowded with people admiring and buying the hand painted porcelain ware. We saw one painter at work decorating vases.

The wooden shoes were made of willow which was quite wet. A machine shaped the outside much like a key is made, and the inside machine hollowed out the sole of the shoe. After five weeks of drying time, the shoe is sanded and finished. Some are left plain; others are carved or painted red and decorated. While tourists buy many of these shoes, we were told that people who work in the fields and wet lands of Holland buy thousands of pairs each year.

Our days were crowded with exciting things to see and do. With the American dollar dropping against the guilder, most of our souvenirs are in the form of the many slides Dave took and our happy memories of the Netherlands.

Lately we have been busy with activities involving our military forces. The Tempelhof Open House was held this spring to commemorate the thirty year anniversary of the Airlift. This has been held in the fall previously, but from this year on, it will be held each spring. We are fortunate to be here during the year it has been held twice. Last fall I wrote an article about it, and we learned much more this spring. We spent quite a bit of time there selling various kinds of food and drinks for Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts and the Class of 1980. More than 425,000 visitors attended this 15th event.

Col. Gayle Malvorsen, known as the "Candy Bomber" when he dropped candy tied to handkerchief parachutes to the children as he flew his 140 missions during the Airlift, returned to Tempelhof. Several of the children who received the candy came to meet him, some of them bringing the makeshift parachutes, which had been kept all those years. Col. Malvorsen was a real hero, as evidenced by the hundreds of people who gathered to meet him and give gifts of flowers as he stood near his airplane. He was interviewed on radio and television, and his outgoing manner was very evident as he conversed in German and English with his many admirers. Paul was happy to receive a rare autographed photo from him.

Another World War II hero was honored that week end, also. Paul and I attended the ceremonies at which the U. S. Army Headquarters were named the Lucius D. Clay Headquarters. The former U. S. Commander who engineered the Airlift died in 1978, and his wife and two sons were present for the unveiling of the bronze plaque. The Army and Air Force Honor Guards and the Army Band were on hand, and officials from the British and French forces joined the Americans. The dress uniforms were very impressive to see, and the marching and drill team precision was thrilling to watch.

The next week end we attended the Allied Forces Parade held near the Victory Column on Strasse des 17. Juni. This street, which starts out near the Brandenburg Gate (which divides East and West Berlin) as Unter den Linden, changes names ten times along its 30 kilometers through West Berlin. A 13-gun salute started things and must have stirred memories for so many Berliners. As the ten bands marched past, interspersed with Allied troops and motorized equipment of unbelievable variety, one has to be impressed. As we lined the sidewalk for a mile or more, hundreds of German police maintained close security behind us and in front of the crowd.

The area along the parade route had been the scene of vast destruction during the battle for Berlin in 1945. It was used as a landing strip for small planes which needed access to Hitler's bunker. On both sides of the street the once beautiful Tiergarten sacrificed its ancient trees to heat homes when coal was not available during and after the war. The Allied Powers sent the trees and replanted the Tiergarten. It is a beautiful section, but no trees there are older than 35 years. The sound of tanks and armored equipment going down that street was eerie.

WEST BETHEL CHURCH

From a sermon, July 29, 1979, by Bert Griffith, pastor, West Bethel Union Church, "Part I, The Holy Spirit Convinces the World of Sin," based on the Scripture John 16:7-11, "Nevertheless I tell you the truth; it is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you. And when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment: Of sin, because they believe not me; Of righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more; Of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged."

As we look at the introduction of this portion of scripture today, this is a promise that Jesus was making to the sorrowful disciples. They were standing and Jesus was going to depart from them. He was about to be crucified, and he was telling them, "Sorrow not because the Holy Spirit will come to you. If I go not away, he will not come." He was referring to the Holy Spirit of God, and the promise was made to the apostles and to us. The promise is to us and to as many as the Lord shall call.

The Holy Spirit convicts the world of sin. "It is expedient for you that I go away. For if I go not away, the Comforter will not come... and when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin." The word, reprove, here might be translated convince; convinces the world of sin. The implication is that conviction by way of argumentation and coming with power upon the mind is equal to a demonstration here. He demonstrates the power. The world is being demonstrated to of the awfulness of sin. We have a demonstration of the world today in Isaiah 5:20, "Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil." The world is saying evil is good, bitter is sweet, illegality is legal. If you don't like morality, pass a law and change it, but the Holy Spirit convicts the world of sin. Morality and the Holy Spirit are literally one. The righteousness of God, the pureness of His love, the shining beauty of His morality can rise and it can be now. You can follow Christ. You can come to Him, simply by faith. The Holy Spirit generally convinces us of some enormous, particular sin and generally it is pride that stands in

SENATOR COHEN From Washington

The long-awaited Senate debate on the strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT) has begun. The Armed Services Committee, on which I serve, and the Foreign Relations Committee have begun to hold hearings on the treaty and its implications for American and world security.

The SALT debate is going to be very long and complex. Many in the Senate, including myself, have already made it clear that they will insist upon modification or clarification of the treaty. Given the resistance of the Administration and the Soviet Union to significant changes in the text, the manner in which modifications are considered by the Senate may directly affect the treaty's fate.

The process by which the Senate considers treaties is well established in law and tradition. Once hearings on the treaty are completed, the relevant committee, usually Foreign Relations, will write a report and send the treaty to the Senate floor. During the floor debate, the treaty can be modified or clarified in a number of ways. These changes, depending on how they are made, can alter the treaty radically or merely slightly. Some kinds of changes require the agreement of the signatory nation—in this case the Soviet Union—while others do not.

If the SALT debate is to be fully understood, one must first understand the different terms that are used to describe the changes that can be made in the treaty and the instruments of ratification.

Procedurally, the Senate first considers the treaty itself, debating each article in turn and considering amendments to the various provisions as it goes along.

After all proposed amendments are disposed of, the Senate then considers the actual Resolution of Ratification.

An amendment modifies an article of the treaty itself. An amendment is offered before the vote on ratification takes place and it must be accepted by both parties to the treaty, since it changes the terms of the agreement.

A reservation modifies the Senate's Resolution of Ratification. Reservations, which are in effect qualifications to the treaty, are binding only if the Soviet Union assents.

An understanding constitutes an interpretation or clarification of the treaty, but does not change the provisions. It does not require the assent of the other signatory, although in practice the cosignatory's views are usually sought while an understanding is being considered.

In all cases, these changes require only a majority vote, while the Resolution of Ratification itself requires a two-thirds vote for approval.

The distinctions may seem arcane, but the Senate will doubtless insist upon a number of clarifications and modifications in sections of the treaty it considers ambiguous or possibly counter to the best interests of the United States. It is possible that the Administration or the Soviet Union may be unwilling to accept certain kinds of changes in the treaty or in the ratification resolution. In such circumstances, the difference between an amendment and an understanding may well determine whether the SALT treaty will ultimately be acceptable to all concerned.

I personally have a number of concerns about SALT's impact on the American-Soviet balance of power. These concerns and the way they are addressed during the debate may well determine my final vote on ratification.

ANNUAL FALL FOLIAGE TRAIN EXCURSION SCHEDULED FOR SATURDAY, SEPT. 29

The 19th annual Fall Foliage passenger train trip, sponsored by the 470 Railroad Club of Portland, Maine, has been scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 29.

This always popular rail, gas-free excursion will operate between Portland, Maine and Island Pond, Vt., and return over the tracks of the Grand Trunk Railway. Three diesel locomotives will pull the eighteen car special of air-conditioned coaches through beautiful Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont scenery at the height of the Fall foliage season. The train will take individuals, family groups, sightseers, rail fans and photographers through breath taking White Mountain notches by way of Gorham and Berlin, N. H., and on to the Connecticut River Valley at North Stratford. The train then crosses and heads through Essex County, Vt., to a destination of Island Pond. Photo stops have been scheduled throughout the day to allow passengers to capture the fall colors of northern New England. The popular stop at Starks, N. H., has again been included so that the passengers may view the old covered bridge and church.

This traffic free excursion will depart the Grand Trunk Station site at the corner of India and Commercial Streets, in Portland at 8 a. m., EDT and will return to the same location at about 8 p. m. The train will stop for passengers at Danville Jct., and South Paris, Maine in both directions.

Tickets and information available from Ron Johnson, The 470 Railroad Club, P. O. Box 2468, South Portland, Maine 04106. Seats on the train aren't reserved, but there will be a seat for every ticket sold. Traditionally, the excursion is a sellout, so ticket sales will positively cease when train capacity has been reached. Cancellations cannot be made after Aug. 31. Please enclose a stamped addressed envelope with ticket requests.

"We are particularly happy to again be able to sponsor this traditional autumn event, especially in view of rising prices," 470 Railroad Club President Jerry Angier went on to say, "This annual excursion provides an ideal opportunity for people to ride a mode of transportation that is all but non-existent in Northern New England. Passenger trains last operated regularly into Portland in 1965." The 470 Railroad Club is the Portland Division of the Railroad Enthusiasts, Inc., a national organization. The railroad club began railroad excursions with a bus trip to Edville Railroad at South Carver, Mass., back in 1956, to visit the two foot gauge trains that formerly operated in Maine. The club ran its first charter train trip in 1961 over the Belfast and Moosehead Lake Railroad in Belfast, Maine. From these modest beginnings, the annual 470 Railroad Club Fall Foliage excursions have grown to an 18 car train filled with over 1,000 passengers.

POWER COMPANY AIDS LOONS NESTING ON LAKE UMBAGOG

Twelve loon chicks hatched on Lake Umbagog this year, after a complete failure in 1978, but only after a vital assist from the Union Water Power Company of Lewiston, reports Maine Audubon Society's loon survey.

Loons nest right at the waters edge so their nests are vulnerable to flooding. Last year the biologist assigned to Lake Umbagog reported all the first nests were lost when high water washed them out. To complete the disaster, attempts to nest a second time were defeated by a rapid drawdown of water at the Errol Dam, which left the nests high and dry, inaccessible to the loons which cannot walk on land.

The dam is controlled by the Union Water Company of Lewiston which must balance the needs of power generation, flood control and wildlife habitat. Scott Sutcliffe, Director of Loon Preservation Committee, a project of the Audubon Society of New Hampshire, and Bill Ginn, Director of Maine Audubon Society, arranged a meeting with Bill Grove, Agent for the Company. They agreed upon a cooperative plan to save the loon nests without impairing the companies other responsibilities. This year the Loon Preservation Committee biologists monitored the nests and informed the Company when the eggs were laid. Careful control of the inflow and release of water, a difficult feat in view of changing weather conditions, kept the fluctuation within six inches during the six week period during which incubation proceeded. So twelve loon chicks hatched, to help maintain the dwindling loon population.

Efforts like this one by loon protectors in New Hampshire and Maine led Rawson L. Wood, Chairman of Loon Preservation Committee, to predict: "The 1979 nesting season may be the most successful on record. A few good years like this in succession could reverse the population decline and assure a future in New Hampshire for this beautiful wilderness bird." The loon is much threatened in New Hampshire but is doing better in Maine, although it faces specific threats on lakes with highly developed shorelines and in areas where the water level is artificially regulated.

AS THY DAYS

"As thy days, so shall thy strength be."—Deut. 33:25.
Do thy weary footsteps falter?
Does the path seem steep and hard?
Dost thou long to drop the crosses,
And fly home to thy reward?
Lift thy heart in holy courage,
Let thy faith the promise seek,
For His good word never faileth:
"As thy days thy strength shall be."
Weak and faint, does life seem ebbing,
Does all hope of victory flee?
Fear not, O beloved toiler,
"As thy days thy strength shall be."
Does the mountain path grow rougher?
Still the Lord hath need of thee;
He hath trod the steep of Calvary;
As thy days thy strength shall be."
Does the tempest beat more fiercely?
Still shall stand His blest decree,
All the waves shall not overwhelm thee;
"As thy days thy strength shall be."
Hush thy heart in sweet abiding,
Let all doubt and sorrow flee;
Sink to rest upon His bosom,
All His strength shall be for thee.

WALKING WITH JESUS CHRIST

Today's cook books contain a fantastic array of recipes — some simple using but one or two utensils—other require a multitude of gadgets including a computerized micro-wave oven.

The Holy Bible like a cook book can be simple and plain while some parts are complicated even taxing the minds of the most learned and prayerful theologians.

That's the way it is with some Christians using terms and wording that are meaningless to some people. Frequently the words such as. Witness and testimony bring to mind courtroom procedures. When Jesus spoke he kept it sweet and simple—using parables (examples) of which most are found in the Book of Matthew—some in Luke and Mark. The Book of John is a lovely and comparatively easy book to read, though right off we encounter the use of the word "Word"—a verse or two further on we see the words: "Light"—"The Lamb of God." These refer to Jesus Christ—as we prayerfully think and ponder these seemingly strange verses God will reveal His meaning and intent for each of us.

Later as we—if we haven't already—accept the truth of the Bible and the writer of the Books—as our Teacher—Lord and Savior—He will open our eyes and ears of understanding, words and phrases will leap out at us and we'll be amazed!

Luke 24:45 "Then opened He their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures." 2 Timothy 3:16—"For all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." Psalm 119:105—"Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."

Health Views
Simple tests to detect back problems in your children.

"As the twig is bent, so grows the tree" could also read, "As the child's back is bent, so grows the adult." A surprising number of back problems that show up in later life can be traced back to childhood accidents. This article describes four easy checks of a child's posture that any parent can make to discover potential back problems early. If any are present, a professional examination is recommended.

1. Shoulder Check — have the child stand straight. Both shoulders should be level. One shoulder high is an indication of problems.

2. Hem Check — check the skirt hem to see if it hangs crooked—or if every new skirt purchased has to be altered on just one side.

3. Bending Check — have child bend straight forward from the waist, arms hanging relaxed to the floor. Check on either side of the spine to see if the muscles "bunch" up. (A sign of scoliosis—curvature of the spine.)

4. Shoe Check — Children wear out shoes in a hurry. This is expected. But if one shoe wears out well ahead of the other—especially if the wear is centered on the edge of the shoe—the possibility of spinal problems exists.

These simple tests performed from time to time during a child's formative years may well prevent problems in the future.

This Week in Washington

by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie

Fisheries Research

Along with Senators Ted Kennedy of Massachusetts and Warren Magnuson of Washington, I have cosponsored a bill designed to improve the government's fisheries research and development financing program.

The bill we have introduced, called the National Fisheries Development Act, revises the Saltonstall-Kennedy Fund, which is financed by taxes levied on fish we import from other countries.

When this fund was established 25 years ago, its aim was to provide government financing for a variety of demonstration projects in our fishing industry, including research experiments with new techniques, education and marketing development.

But as Maine fishermen know, the federal government has only recently begun to take an active interest in promoting improvements in our domestic fishing industry.

The United States imports $2 billion more seafood than it exports. With our own fishing resource available through the 200 mile limit, we ought to be doing a better job of exporting fish and fish products.

The bill also establishes a program designed to develop foreign markets for fish caught in the United States. Under the legislation, no fewer than six fisheries marketing experts would be sent overseas to work full time on new marketing opportunities.

The National Fisheries Development Act is a modest reform in our financing programs for the fishing industry. If enacted, it should improve the focus of the federal government's programs to encourage new fishing and processing methods, to find new markets and to make greater use

RUMFORD HOSPITAL LABORATORY NEEDS "NORMAL" VOLUNTEERS

Claire DeVries, laboratory supervisor at Rumford Community Hospital is looking for 100 "normal" volunteers to assist the hospital lab in an important project to establish the normals of tests for the greater Rumford area. Specifically, she is looking for a minimum of 50 men and 50 women, ages 18 to 55.

Normal volunteers are identified as persons who are free of illness and disease, and who have never had a major operation. There is only one blood test involved in this program. From this test, a diagnostic profile will be done at no charge. It will provide a general blood work-up which would cost up to $150 per person. If any abnormal results are found, the volunteer's physician will be contacted.

Before taking the test, the volunteers must abstain from taking medication of any kind including aspirin or birth control pills for a two-week period. However, before discontinuing the use of prescribed medications, your family physician should be consulted. No alcohol of any kind should be consumed for three days prior to the testing.

Tests will be scheduled as soon as the lab has the required number of persons needed. Anyone interested in participating in this program should call 364-4581, extension 311 and leave your name, address and telephone number.

Five years ago, the University of Southern Maine introduced a two-year associate degree program in therapeutic recreation.

That program, which trains graduates to become activity leaders at hospitals, schools and other settings, has grown from an initial enrollment of 20 to 83.

Explains Sullivan, "This two-year program cannot, however, provide either an adequate theoretical background or sufficient practical training to meet the complex and challenging responsibilities of a therapeutic recreation specialist."

While the USM's two year associate degree program in therapeutic recreation prepares students to become activity leaders, the four-year program will prepare graduates who are knowledgeable in such areas as administration, supervision, program design, counseling and therapeutic intervention.

Both are designed to work hand in hand with private industry in financing the expansion of a traditional Maine industry. Together they represent overdue assistance for an industry which had declined in the face of overwhelming foreign competition, but which promises to be strong again.

The Maine Army National Guard has a new program for men and women who desire to become commissioned officers.

"Through the Army National Guard/Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) Simultaneous Membership Program, a student can earn a commission as a second lieutenant while completing college," said Brig. Gen. Charles S. Reed Jr., Maine Deputy Adjutant General.

Gen. Reed said the Simultaneous Membership Program (SMP) is a voluntary officer training program which allows enlisted Guard members to train and receive entitlements while a member of the ROTC Advanced Course currently being offered at the University of Maine at Orono (UMO).

In addition, the SMP allows for ROTC Advanced Course members to enlist in the Maine Army National Guard and receive Guard benefits and training while completing the ROTC program.

Officer cadets would be paid in the grade and years of service attained, but not less than the grade of E-5, resulting in an average of $180 monthly ($80 Guard pay, $100 ROTC Stipend). Individuals must be less than 25 years of age (waivable in exceptional cases), have good moral character, appearance, personality and scholarship, plus an aptitude for military training.

Further information on the ROTC/SMP commissioning option may be obtained from the nearest State Armory or the Department of Military Science at UMO.

SUNSET REBEKAH LODGE SPECIAL MEETING, AUG. 20

Sunset Rebekah Lodge will meet in special session at the hall on Monday evening, Aug. 20, for first nomination of officers. All members should plan to attend.

UNIVERSITY OF SOUTHERN MAINE OFFERS NEW DEGREE COURSE

The University of Southern Maine this fall will become the first institution of higher education in Maine to offer a four-year baccalaureate degree program in therapeutic recreation.

And USM will be among only four other colleges and universities in New England to offer a bachelor of science degree in the highly specialized field.

USM's new four-year program will train students to become therapeutic recreation specialists to work with elderly and handicapped at schools, hospitals, nursing homes, institutions, rehabilitation centers and camps and as consultants to public and private agencies.

Graduates of the program, explains USM's Dr. James V. Sullivan, will be trained to develop appropriate leisure and recreation opportunities for the elderly and handicapped and will be qualified to serve as administrators and supervisors in a variety of therapeutic recreation settings.

"The need for therapeutic recreation specialists is growing," reports Sullivan, a professor of physical education and recreation at USM.

NOTES FROM THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Good News

The chamber is pleased to see Bethel host the Aug. 23 and 24 workshop on hardwood silviculture and more significantly that Bethel area facilities will be employed in support of the workshop. Upwards to 50 participants are expected according to the UMO coordinator for this workshop. (See separate article, this issue).

Bad News

Maps have been ripped from the outdoor information centers at Riverside and Greenwood rest areas. This is the first instance of vandalism at these information sites. While the maps themselves are not expensive the plexiglass which was either broken or taken is. Therefore, instead of simply putting up a Maine map which could be more useful to all travelers, an outline map will be painted on the map panels in order to provide basic directional and mileage information.

The Chamber received a form to report projected area gasoline shortages through the Maine Publicity Bureau to the Energy Office. The report would have to be in Energy Office hands prior to the 15th of each month. As president of the chamber, I do not believe that another layer in the government allocation process will help the situation; therefore, we do not plan to collect and provide this information. The chamber will continue for a while at least to report the local stations gas availability. Our letter of some weeks ago remains unanswered.

This is a newly developing field," says Sullivan, "and the jobs will be there for graduates."

Demand for therapeutic recreation specialists is such, notes Sullivan, that at least 20 students now enrolled in USM's two-year therapeutic recreation program plan to apply for admission to the baccalaureate program this fall.

"Apart from the state's educational systems," he says, "numerous public and private agencies are potential employers of therapeutic recreation specialists. For instance, the Maine State Department of Health and Welfare lists 59 licensed hospitals, 125 nursing homes and 297 boarding homes in the state. In addition, two institutions for the mentally retarded, plus one for the blind and one for the deaf, four cerebral palsy centers, one veterans' hospital and three camps for handicapped youngsters are operated in the State of Maine."

Additionally, the need for therapeutic recreation specialists in schools will increase with the "mainstreaming" of handicapped children into public schools.

About 80 students are expected to be enrolled in USM's new baccalaureate therapeutic recreation program during its first five years. "We expect to have students enrolled from all over the State of Maine and from other parts of New England as well," says Sullivan. USM will continue to offer its associate degree program in therapeutic recreation also.

A unique aspect of the four-year program will include a one-semester internship at agencies, hospitals and nursing homes where students will be able to apply classroom theory to practical experiences.

Courses leading to the bachelor of science degree in therapeutic recreation will be offered by USM's day program, during USM's summer sessions and during evening hours through USM's Continuing Education Division.

Additional information is available from Sullivan at the Department of Recreation and Leisure Studies, University of Southern Maine, 96 Falmouth Street, Portland, Maine 04103 (telephone 780-4172).

The method for compiling the street numbers involves tracings of tax maps, information from assessors' property valuation cards, and photos from two aerial photo surveys done of the town, in 1956 and 1972, as well as the latest topographical map for Bethel, which shows a general location of most structures and their uses.

The system the town is developing is admittedly an approximate one as the maps available are not exact on all measurements. Many structures have been erected since 1972; their placement on lots will have to be checked out on the street. A field-check of the sequence of numbers will be necessary, also, to see whether it is in fact correct and reasonable. But the Town Office staff feels the purpose of the system—to provide the emergency services with accurate reference points for all locations in the town well for many years to come. To better assure this, the responsible emergency services, as well as the Board of Selectmen, the Planning Board, and other committees of the town government are being asked for their comments on the system as it develops.

Residents should note that the Elderly Householders Tax and Rent Rebate forms are now available at the Town Office. A representative will be at the Town Office on Aug. 21 and 28 from 9 a.m. to noon to assist residents in completing the forms.

VAIL FAMILY REUNION

The descendants of David and Alice Shields Vail held their 53rd annual reunion at the Bear River Grange Hall in Newry on Sunday, Aug. 5, with 92 members and guests attending.

The member traveling the greatest distance within the United States was Mrs. Erva MacPherson of Long Beach, Calif. Those traveling the farthest from outside the country were Mr. and Mrs. Jay Wright and family of Sydney, Australia.

The usual activities were enjoyed including a delicious buffet dinner prepared by the members. Also, there were prizes given to the lucky members present. Items, all hand made, were donated by Thomas "Fitz" Vail, the oldest member; Mrs. Janet Vail; and Donna Ray. Mrs. Jeanne Klein received a quilt, Merle Beausoliel was given a lovely ceramic Santa, Mrs. Eleanor Parsons took home an afghan, and Francis Vail III received a toaster cover and holder set. In addition there was a cash door prize received by Mrs. Janis Black.

BIT AND SPUR RIDING CLINIC HELD AUG. 5

The Bit & Spur Riding Club held a clinic on Aug. 5. Linda Reimons, a student from the American School of Dressage, was the instructor for the morning. She gave group instruction and then worked with each member individually, correcting riding positions. Mrs. James Owen came in the afternoon and went over what is expected in a dressage test. She then took one rider at a time into the arena and helped them so they could better understand what judges would be looking for during a test. Kathy Carver finished the day's instruction by explaining proper ways to enter a fence, correcting positions and how to finish and prepare for the next fence. At the end of the day, hot, tired horses and riders went home, each having learned much from the clinic, thanks to Linda, Mrs. Owen and Kathy.

Mr. and Mrs. Craig Morgan are receiving congratulations on the birth of a baby boy, Christopher Miles, at the Brunswick hospital. The baby was born Aug. 7, 1979, and weighed 7 pounds, 10 oz.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Morgan have been caring for Chad Ronald Morgan while his mother has been waiting for the arrival of the second baby. They took little Chad to Brunswick Tuesday where he will be staying at Wendy Morgan's trailer with his maternal grandparent, who came from Vermont to be with her daughter while she is recuperating.

Mrs. Esther Davis and mother, Mrs. Mary Brown, went on a calling expedition Tuesday, the 7th, which can't be beat. They went to Livermore Falls, called on a sister and daughter, Mrs. Emily Pike. Then to Gibbs Mills, calling on a brother, Don Brown. They went to the bank at Livermore, then to Moosehill, where they dined at dinner time with Mrs. Methyl Brown, a sister-in-law; then went to Wayne to call on Laura Walton, to Mr. and Mrs. Irving Randall's home for a visit. The couple returned to Livermore Falls and had supper with Mr. and Mrs. James Whittemore, another sister. They got home at 9 p. m. How's that for snapping around?

Olive Davis attended Franklin Grange Monday night with Mr. and Mrs. Carl Brooks, Lyndell and Arline Farr.

Tuesday night was Oxford-Pomona regular meeting when Carl, Lettie and I went to Bolsters Mills for the evening.

Olive Davis and Helvi Tucci took in the Star Birthday sale at the town hall Bryant Pond. Then they rode to Bethel on errands and went to Zayres at Rumford, shopping before returning home.

GREENWOOD GIRLS SOFTBALL TEAM UNDEFEATED IN 1979

The Greenwood Girls softball team (8-12 year olds) finished their 1979 season Thursday evening, Aug. 9, with a sweeping victory over the "Old Fogies," better known as the Mothers. This wrapped up a 9 game, 8-win, 0-loss, 1-tie season for the team, whose eight previous victories were over Bryant Pond, Bethel Blue Teams, Bethel Village People, Bethel Disco Dolls and a tie with the Bethel All-Stars. Preceding Thursday's finale, a family cook-out was held at the Greenwood field. Coach Louise Chapman, scorekeeper, Ann Roy and former coach, Shirley Seames, presented team members with the following awards.

Participation awards to the 12 year olds who will be leaving the team were presented by Shirley Seames to Stephanie Fuller, Shari Cole, Susie Cole and Jodie Kimball (3 year awards), Dawn Roberts (2 year award), and Linda Lowe (1 year award).

Special awards to the team members were presented to the following: Louise Chapman and Ann Roy; Andrea Howe, the longest time at bat; Sarah Chapman, improved batter; Lisa Jordan, most willing to help; Lynn Seames, hustling to 1st base; Stephanie Fuller, improved batter; Shari Cole, strongest arm; Suzi Roy, newest pitcher; Susie Cole, coach's award; Anita Kimball, taking the most chances; Jodie Kimball, keeping the team on their toes; Lisa Cox, her first scoring run, July 31, 1979; Lori Cox, improved fielder; Dawn Roberts, best all around; Keri Roberts, most aggressive player; Kandi Roberts, most improved; Kelly Jordan, fastest base runner; Wanda Crockett, most aggressive batting stance; Angie Martin, improved baseman; Alki Chapman, bat girl award.

Special awards also went to five of the parents, who through their time and energy were always on hand: Cindy Cox, transportation; Irving and Ellen Cole, best attendance; Joan Robertes, 3rd base coach; Ann Roy, scorekeeper of the year. A special thanks also to Ray Seames, Andy Crockett and Rick Roy for their time, and to all the parents whose support and encouragement of their daughter was evident in the team spirit and cooperation that made the girls the #1 team that they are.

A special thanks to all my girls for the plaque that will always mean a lot to me, but not as much as having been a part of the team with each and every one of you.

Recently, we left the car at Pine Point and Earl and the boys went swimming in the ocean. It was foggy so we couldn't see very far, but Earl said that Old Orchard was just down the beach a little ways. We decided to walk down. It took quite a while since they had to go swimming again every few hundred feet, but I still don't believe that it was any more difficult, as the police officer at Old Orchard said it was. No one seemed too anxious to walk back after hearing that, so we got a ride and then had to convince the parking

The last week's news was a wedding at the Covered Bridge and the return to the bride's home in a long line of autos led by the team of ponies with the bride and groom riding in style.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Verrill of Concord, Mass., were at their place three days.

The Rawleigh dealer called on us the other day.

Oh boy—Our second nice rainy day, how happy the crops are to get this good drink. Thunder showers so far have been light and very few in spite of the horrid heat.

Something happened that made yours truly very happy last week. Peggy Blake had a letter from Bea Felt. Bea and Tink lived at, and Tink was the herdsman for P. C. Thurston. It was so good to hear from them. Tink is still a herdsman and they live in Monmouth, in a nine room house. The family of boys and girls is all grown up and away. How Bea and Tink must rattle in nine rooms. If I know Bea, every room is dusted every day.

The Yates have been pretty much home body's the past week. They have made a start for this

STUDENT FINANCIAL AID EXPLAINED IN UPDATED GUIDE

A unique guide to post-secondary educational opportunities in Maine has just been updated by a University of Southern Maine educator.

The 16-page tabloid publication, explains its editor, USM history professor George P. Connick, is a resource of information on all Maine's public and private institutions of higher education.

Entitled "Post-Secondary Opportunities in Maine, 1979-80," it explains what financial aid opportunities are available to students, it provides descriptions of all post-secondary schools in the state, including student costs and enrollment information, and it lists special programs and services for adults and part-time students.

The publication also contains a listing of courses of study, at what institutions they're offered and what degrees, certificates or diplomas are available.

There are 35 institutions of higher education included, ranging from the two largest in the state, the University of Maine at Orono and the University of Southern Maine, through all the private colleges, including Bates, Bowdoin, Colby and others, to smaller schools such as the Portland School of Art.

Many copies of the 20,000 tabloids printed have already been circulated to guidance directors and others, explains Connick, who is director of Associate Degree Studies at USM and co-director of York County Community College Services (YCCCS).

Free copies are available through high school guidance directors or by contacting Associate Degree Studies, University of Southern Maine, 96 Falmouth Street, Portland, Maine 04103 (telephone 780-4470 in Portland.)

The publication is funded jointly by the Post-Secondary Education Commission of Maine and Associate Degree Studies at USM.
